PENNSYLVANIA'S FAVORITE SON

What a man does for his country ought to be remembered greatfully by his countrymen. The ancients by their gratitude made as much reputation, as they won renown by their valor. Indeed the honors which the classic nations conferred on their great men exceeded anything more modern people do for those who serve them. Perhaps it is best for a people not to be too servile in their deference to the great, or too fulsome in their laudation of the famous. We can do honor to public servants best by maintaining our own self respect.

In this spirit we desire now to refer to a citizen of Centre county, whom a State claims as her favorite son, and on whom a nation will some day delight to confer her noblest honor. It is needless to say we refer to Andrew Gregg Curtin, Minister Plenipotentiary to all the Russias.

Ten years ago Col. A. G. Curtin was at the head of State affairs and just then beginning to lay the foundation of that personal and political power to which he subsequently rose, and through which he did so much good service for his State, and won such imperishable glory for himself.

Few who knew Gov. Curtin before he was elected Chief Magistrate of Pennsylvania, were aware of his vast abilities. Like all men fixed by destiny as actors in a great crisis it required the times to develop him and the test of great forces and trials to call out his powers.

We write this frankly because it is true. When Curtin was Secretary of the Commonwealth under Gov. Pollock, he did not do anything that was remarkable in the sphere of his duty, simply because he was only called on then to perform routine service.

He was the ever bouyant, genial and gloriously, free-hearted man, generous to a fault and sanguine of life's favorable results, even unto recklessness; but when he became Governor of Pennsylvania and the magnitude of horrid rebellion burst like a thunderbolt on the path of the nation, he was among the first to comprehend its develish ferocity.

Nay, let history be just. Gov. Curtin seemed to take in at a glance what the war meant, because, after he had filled his first quota of three months troops, which a majority of soldiers and statesmen believed would suffice to end the conflict, he immediately began to organize a Reserve Corps. There was as much sagacity in that single act, as in any deed, or recommendation done or made during the war, because the Pennsylvania Reserve Corps saved the honor of the nation, after the sudden disaster of the Bull Run defeat.

The fifteen thousand men whom Curtin, at that period, was able to send to the front, became the nucleus around which the famous Army of the Potomac—an army which on Pennsylvania soil at Gettysburg, struck the final blow, which destroyed rebellion.

We refer to these insolated facts in the career of our fellow citizen as an indication of what was in the man—an illustration of the giant vigor and native unconquerable will of the patriot.

He began his administration in the darkest hour of the country's existence and signalized it throughout by acts of statesmanship which at once stamped him a man of wonderful mental capacity, courage and physical energy. His military labors are no more notable than his civil acts and achievements. On his own responsibility he borrowed a million of dollars, to supply our army, and he paid it, without resorting to direct taxation. In the midst of the exactions of the war, he continued to reduce the ordinary debt of the State and left the office of Governor with a reduced indebtedness, with the claims against the State, growing out of the war adjusted in the departments at Washington, and with large credits in our favor in the national treasury.

We now merely relate recorded facts. History will elaborate these truths, when no page thereof will be emblazoned with a nobler glory than that which presents the record of Andrew G. Curtin's acts as Governor of Pennsylvania. He not only vindicated our loyalty by proving our courage, in deeds of valor and paid our debts, while he provided for the care of the orphans of the war, as he pledged every man he would do before he departed for battle. His fiery eloquence and undaunted zeal, more than once revived the drooping spirits of Pennsylvania. His sagacity saved its honor, his humanity dignified its gratitude and his prompt action maintained its credit.

Are the labors of such men ended? Does the country any longer require their services? Is there no post of duty in which Andrew G. Curtin can continue to distinguish himself? These are inquiries indulged in, in all parts of Pennsylvania, if not all over the Union.

His fame is as much a portion of our national glory as are the acts of any civilian identified with the struggle to preserve the government from the attacks of traitors.

In his present diplomatic position, Curtin can, of course, distinguish himself and at the same time find peace and repose, but, we are of those who believe he should beat home, alike for the safety in Pennsylvania politics, and as an influence of victory in our struggle to maintain the National supremacy of the Republican party.

Let us be plain, then, and arouse our preference in Pennsylvania's favorite son, Andrew G. Curtin, as a Republican candidate for Vice President. General Cameron has publicly declined to have his name used for this position, and Gov. Jno. W. Geary has announced his determination to retire to private life at the end of his present term. This leaves the field clear for Curtin.

Grant and Curtin would be the strongest ticket which could possibly be nominated, embodying, as it would, the glory of the field of war and of the civil council, when the great conflict was waged. We deem no locality so proper as the home of Curtin to bring him out for the Vice Presidency. What say the Republican press of Pennsylvania to our ticket for 1872? Here it is:

FOR PRESIDENT,
THE GREAT SOLDIER—U. S. GRANT.

FOR VICE PRESIDENT,
THE GREAT FRIEND OF THE SOLDIER—A. G. CURTIN.

DEMOCRATIC editors have hot times in Williamsport, Our quondam friend Furey, who has lately become associated in the editorial control of the "Gazette," took umbrage at a paragraph which appeared in Levi L. Tate's "Sun" so that when the former met the latter, he, the aforesaid former, attempted to lather the face of his brother editor, by spitting therein. Surely, if this be true, it is unlike a Furey, and unbecoming the assistant clerk of the State Senate. However editors may disagree in print, it is demanded by ordinary decency, that when they meet, they treat each other courteously.—"State Journal."

THE Harrisburg Patriot can find nothing better to urge against Col. Stanton than that he was a contract-surgeon during the war. It is scarcely necessary to say that this is false. Col. Stanton's only contract with the Government was that which was made by hundreds of thousands of Pennsylvania's sons, and which was always matter for the contempt of the Patriot man, viz: To serve the Government faithfully against its enemies for the term of his muster, and more than once his life was perilled in its execution. And at no time during the rebellion did it enter his mind that the post of honor was the private station.

For the REPUBLICAN.

THAT LETTER AGAIN—EXPLANATION DEMANDED.

COL. W. W. BROWN:

Dear Sir:—You will excuse me for asking the privilege of your columns, through which to express my views in relation to a piece of political villainy that has been practiced in Centre county this campaign, and which should receive the condemnation and censure of all honest men of both parties. I have not been in the habit of taking a lively blustering part in politics, nor do I desire to so do now; but when such palpable villainies and frauds are perpetrated in a party, and result in depriving a majority of a party of their choice of candidates, as has been the case in the democratic party (of which party I have been a member for many years) of Centre county this fall; I say the time has arrived that such fraudulent chicanery should be exposed; the guilty parties arraigned before the party and tried, and if convicted should receive a just sentence, and stinging rebuke at the hands of the party. It is almost needless to state, Mr. Editor, that I refer to the Meek-Lytle letter affair. It is well known that the contest for the nomination for the Legislature between Meek and Orvis, was the most spirited that the party has witnessed for years. The friends of both, worked hard and incessantly. And so far as the popular choice of the party was concerned, Orvis was evidently the coming man, and would have been nominated had it not been for a piece of base trickery practiced by his opponent, P. G. Meek. He was the victim of P. G. Meek, alias, a skilled radical letter writer. Now, Mr. Editor, let us call some witnesses on the stand, and examine all the testimony and see who stands convicted, in this slight of hand performance. Meek came out in a leader in his paper, the issue preceding the meeting of our county convention stating he was, in possession, of certain letters written by radical lawyers to certain parties throughout the county, in the interest of John H. Orvis, &c. He did show a letter in the lower end of Pennsvalley, alleged by him to have been written by Isaac Lytle, Secretary of the Republican County Committee, to one James Chambers, advising said Chambers to attend the Democratic elections, and use his influence in getting delegates elected in favor of John H. Orvis. On Monday the day preceding the meeting of our county convention for the nomination of candidates, Col. D. G. Bush and yourself Mr. Editor, waited upon Capt. Isaac Lytle in relation to the letter, written by him as referred to above.

Lytle, when first accosted about the matter, professed surprise, and most positively and emphatically denied having written said letter, or any letter to Chambers, or any other man of a political nature whatever. Lytle then requested the parties, Bush and yourself, to accompany him to see Meek. It not suiting your convenience he went alone. Sometime during said day, he stated the result of his interview with Meek, in the presence of H. Y. Stitzer, Jacob V. Thomas and Col. D. G. Bush, to be about as follows: "Meek told me (Lytle) as he had published a leader stating he had certain letters in his possession, written by radicals, purporting thus and so; and that, when he was down in the valley, his friends asked him if he had any of the letters with him. He said he had. They requested him to show them. He said they were at the hotel in his satchel, and to avoid being tripped up, and seeing the trick was working well, he went back to the hotel, and wrote the letter himself he showed to his Pennsvalley friends, with my name to it. And that said letter had nicely cooked Orvis' kettle down there." Now, that is the story as related by Lytle, after his first interview with Meek, in the presence of the men named, and whom we call on the witness stand to substantiate the same. Next Meek and Lytle are cheek by jowl. They eat together and drink together; and Lytle and Meek get up a correspondence. That correspondence was published in last week's Watchman. There is not much in it one way or the other, so far as the fact in issue is concerned, but might be some evidence that something else had passed between Meek and Lytle in the meantime. Did anybody (Lytle) sell his birthright for a miserable mess of pottage? I am informed the letter published over Lytle's signature, in answer to Meek's, is not published as written by Lytle; but altered by Meek so as to read to suit his side of the case. If such be the case, Lytle, if he claims any honor, and would clear himself from the imputation of having fairly and deliberately sold himself for a money consideration to Meek, should demand the publication of the letter as written by him, unaltered by Meek.

Another correspondence in relation to the matter between your county chairman and Lytle, is also before the public, through the REPUBLICAN and Watchman both. Lytle again denies the writing of the letter. On the Morning of the meeting of our convention, Meek and Stitzer had an interview in relation to the Lytle letter to Chambers. Stitzer suggested that the matter be brought before the convention, and a committee be appointed to investigate the matter. Meek objected, stating it would be very unfair to him, to go into an investigation before the convention, as he could not possibly have time to go up to see Chambers and get his affidavit, which it would be necessary to have. The matter was not brought before our Convention. Since the convention Mr. James Chambers has been seen, and denies ever having received or seen anything of a letter of that kind. Meek now alleges he told the people it was addressed to Chambers so as to throw them off their guard—I suppose to cover up his fraud and forgery.

The evidence as above stated establishes these facts: That Meek did show a letter to his friends in Penns Valley, of the purport above stated, addressed to James Chambers, apparently signed by Isaac Lytle. And if Lytle is to be believed, said letter did defeat our preferred candidate for the Legislature, John H. Orvis. As to the letter being addressed to Chambers, although Meek, used that fact to avoid investigation by the convention, he now admits that he did misrepresent to the people concerning the same. That the writing of the letter is a most damnable piece of political forgery and roguery, in which P. G. Meek is the prime actor, he has not and cannot successfully deny. If he wants to clear his skirts let him publish all the letters he has in his possession, written by radical lawyers, over their signatures; and also show clearly how he got possession of the same. Until this is done, can the democratic party, with safety to itself, become a party to a transaction of so criminal a nature as the above? and which is enough to damn, politically or otherwise, any party that supports the same, or the individual concerned in it. Is our democratic party of Centre county, so lost to all sense of honor and honesty, as to countenance so base a fraud and dare not demand that the record be made satisfactorily clear? If such be the case, Mr. Editor, I for one, want to shake the dust from off my feet and withdraw from it. I take it that if the party is honest, they cannot tolerate such diabolical intrigue.

DEMOCRAT.

For the REPUBLICAN.

PENNSVALLEY, Aug. 25th, 1871.

COL. W. W. BROWN:

Dear Sir:—Our party organ, which is edited by Hon. P. G. Meek, our candidate for Assembly, still keeps mum and avoids the discussion of the great political questions of the day, as presented in the 9th resolution of our democratic platform, adopted by the State convention at Harrisburg; and which is known as the New Departure. The question we want decided is, are we New Departurists or are we not? Until that question is determined one way or another, I positively assert that our ticket will receive a very luke-warm support from this side the mountain. As we now stand as a party in Centre county, we are without any policy at all. Our leader, (Meek) is committed to none, especially as to that involved in the New Departure. Although Meek studiously avoids discussing the New Departure, either to condemn or support it, yet from the evidence that appears of record, he did most successfully manipulate a fraudulent policy, that defrauded Orvis out of the nomination for the legislature, and secured it to himself. There has been a most gross and shameful fraud committed by some one in relation to the Lytle letter, that has really deprived the majority of the democrats of Centre county of their choice for a candidate for the Legislature,—John H. Orvis, Esq.

From the evidence so far adduced, Meek stands convicted, partially at least. That Meek did represent to certain parties that he had a letter in his possession, written by Isaac Lytle to James Chambers of Patton township he dare not deny. The evidence as published by Meek himself, shows that no letter was written by Lytle, or any one else of a political nature to James Chambers of Patton township, so that unless Meek can furnish more satisfactory evidence, he is clearly convicted of misrepresenting to that extent at least; and hence is equally guilty of the fraud, that has swindled the majority of the democracy out of their favorite candidate. And further Lytle positively denies having written such a letter at all, as Meek did show in Penn and other townships in the lower end of our valley. Then where did the letter come from, and how did Meek get it? That Colonel, is another matter we democrats want determined satisfactorily one way or the other between now and the election. If the record is not made perfectly clear, wholly exculpating Meek from the fraud that defeated Orvis, are we as democrats, who boast of our honesty, bound to support a candidate who by fraud and trickery cheated us out of our choice for the legislature? Can we do it consistently with right and honor? If we do, are we not only encouraging such fraud, and putting a premium, on political corruption, that must inevitably ruin us, not only as a party, bit as individuals? Then I say to the honest democrats of Centre, and especially to those of my own Valley (Penns) notwithstanding the Ring favored us with a candidate for Associate Judge, let us have independence and manhood enough to assert our rights, and rebuke the parties who are guilty of the gross fraud that has been perpetrated upon us as a party. Let us demand that Meek commit himself one way or the other on the New Departure question, and above all demand that he wholly clear his skirts from every suspicion of complicity with the Lytle letter fraud. That he showed a letter to his friends in the lower end of Pennsvalley he does not deny. Then in order to clear up the matter, let said letters be published over the signatures of the writers of them; and let meek show clearly how and through whom he got possession of the same. I as a Democrat claim to have the right to demand it, and ought to be satisfied with nothing less. And if Meek fails to explain fully, and put himself right on the record; then are democrats bound to support him? I say no.

DEMOCRAT FROM POTTER.

CHAPTER ON THE DEMOCRACY.

Here is a chapter on the Democracy which we commend for its truthfulness to the calm and close attention of the candid and honest of all parties. The Philadelphia Post says: When the integrity of the National Government was assailed in the halls of Congress in 1860-61, the Democratic party of the North and South placed itself unmistakably against the country. When secession was threatened, a Democratic President and his advisers confessed that there was no power within the Federal Government to coerce a seceding State. When, finally, the people of a seceded State fired upon the National flag, though many Democrats left their party and joined the indignant patriots who were preparing to resent the outrage, the Democratic party, as an organization, remained in full sympathy with the "oppressed people of the South;" and a Democratic Mayor in the city of New York connived at a scheme to place arms and ammunition in the hands of the insurgents.

In 1863 a Democratic mob resisted the Conscription act, passed to recruit our depleted battalions, and being addressed by their Democratic Governor as "my friends," instead of being put down by the strong arm of the law, commenced their work of pillage and murder, and pursued it until overtaken and surppressed by a force of Federal troops, taken from the already too weak armies operating in the field.

In 1864 the Democratic party boldly declared "the experiment of war a failure," and nominated for President the greatest experimental failure of the war.

In 1865 a band of conspirators, all of whom were of the Democratic creed, assassinated the President of the United States, whose memory will remain dear while this continent has a place upon this planet, and will not be "more execrated than an inmate of the Eastern Penitentiary," Mr. Sheppard to the contrary, notwithstanding.

In 1868 the Democratic party nominated for President the man who had either winked at the incendiary and murderous mob of 1863 or had been too impotent to quell its riot.

In 1871 the Democratic party, which a decade earlier yielded to the aristocracy of slavery, had denied the right of the General Government to coerce a rebellious State, now, yielding to a mobocracy of intolerant ignorance, asserted its power to coerce a body of peaceful citizens who desired to parade the public streets, and precipitated the bloody and disgraceful riot of July 12 in New York city.

Add to the counts of this indictment the innocent blood of enfranchised citizens, murdered by the masked assassins of the South during the past six years, and ask yourselves whether it is not your duty, Republicans and loyal Democrats, to keep the Government, National, State and Municipal, in the hands of the Republican party.

PENNSYLVANIA ELECTION.

It is now about six weeks to the October election in Pennsylvania. All of our information is to the effect that the Republicans are harmonious, and that apathy only can defeat them. This, chiefly, is what they will have to contend against. Considering the bearing the election will have on the fortunes of parties and the future management of the Government, we cannot believe that even this sole ground of Democratic expectation will not be swept away by the well-directed efforts that are making within the next twenty days. There should be no doubt whatever, for it is inconceivable that Pennsylvania should deliberately open the way for the return of the Democratic party to power. No doubt that a considerable body of Republicans feel only a diminished interest in politics, and these above all others are the class of citizens who should take the deepest interest and put forth the greatest efforts to prevent such a catastrophe—for catastrophe they must admit the accession to power of the Democratic party would be. To all such we desire to bring the subject home, and ask them to decide whether the country their own interests, collectively or individually, would be better or worse off by remanding the country to the control of the party which precipitated the rebellion, sympathized with the rebels throughout the war, that embraces in its ranks a vast majority of those who sided against the Government, and today challenges the verdict wrought out by the great struggle. It is in that light that the ensuing election should be viewed, and we are persuaded that every person who so regards it, either by commission or omission will contribute to the overthrow of the Republican party.

The time has not come for a change. The offices to be won or lost amount not to a feather's weight with the great body of the voters. If there was nothing more valuable or important at stake, there would be little reason for concern. But there are considerations against which the offices are as nothing. It would be distrusting the intelligence and conscience of Republicans to suppose that they do not understand what these considerations are. If there are Republicans who really desire to witness the return of the Democratic party to power with the Tammanyites in the lead, as they assuredly would be, let them frankly so act. But if, as we believe is the fact the Republicans of Pennsylvania contemplate such an event only as a real calamity, let them, at the ensuing election, act as they feel, as the only way to avert it.—Pittsburg Commercial.

For the REPUBLICAN.

MESSRS EDITORS.—We noticed a few weeks ago, a letter published in the columns of your most excellent paper, recommending the nomination of Andrew J. Swartz, of Spring twp., for the important and trustworthy office of County Commissioner. Would say that we most heartly endorse the sentiments put forth in that letter, and hope and trust that thedelegates will without hesitation, nominate "Andy" on Wednesday next, and thereby secure the election of one of CentreCos., noblest and best Republicans. If the convention will comply with this, our request, as we have reason to believe they will, we give our word and honor as well as our ☞'s; that we will astonish the natives.

P. S.—Don't forget Col. W. W. Brown, for the Legislature. FERGUSON.

TOBACCO.—It is with pleasure we direct the attention of our readers to the advertisement of Samuel Lipton, in another column of the REPUBLICAN. He has a good assortment of the best brands of tobacco, snuff and segars, and is with all an excellent young man. He is worthy the patronage of all who use the "filthy weed." Give him a call.

ALICE CARY'S SWEETEST POEM.

No apology is needed at this time for reproducing the following requisite lines by the lamented Alice Cary—lines, which, in the judgment of so competent a critic as Edgar A. Poe, deserve to rank among the very finest contributions to the poetic literature of this country:

Of all the beautiful pictures
That hang on Memory's wall,
Is one of a dim old forest,
That seemeth best of all;
Nor for its gnarled oaks olden,
Dark with the mistletoe;
Not for the violets golden
That sprinkle the vale below;
Nor for the milk white lilies
That lean from the fragrant hedge,
Coquetting all day with the sunbeams,
And stealing their golden edge;
Not for the vines on the upland
Where the bright red berries rest;
Nor the pinks, nor the pale, sweet cowslip,
It seemeth to me the best.

I once had a little brother
With eyes that were dark and deep—
In the lap of that olden forest
He lieth in peace asleep;
Light as the down of the thistle,
Free as the winds that blow,
We roved there the beautiful summers,
The summers of long ago;
But his feet on the hills grew weary,
And one of the autumn eves
I made for my little brother
A bed of the yellow leaves.

Sweetly his pale arms folded
My neck in a meek embrace,
As the light of immortal beauty
Silently covered his face;
And when the arrows of sunset
Lodged in the tree tops bright
He fell, in his saint-like beauty,
Asleep by the gates of light,
Therefore, of all the pictures
That hang on memory's wall,
The one of the dim old forest
Seemeth best of all.

LOVE AND FEAR.

BY T. S. ARTHUR.

"Did you hear me, sir?"

"I'm not deaf," muttered the boy in undertone, not meant for the ear of his father, but reaching it nevertheless.

Red anger burned instantly in the face of Mr. Somers; his eyes flashed with cruel purpose; his arm moved with an impulse to strike.

"Take care, sir?" Mr. Somers advanced toward the lad in a threatening way; but restrained the hand half raised for a blow.

"Off with you, this instant!" he said, in a passionate way; "and don't let the grass grow under your feet. If you're not back in thirty minutes by the watch, I'll flog you within an inch of your life."

And Mr. Somers drew out his watch to note the time; then turned from the boy, actually trembling from excitement.

Richard—that was the lad's name—manifested neither fear nor alacrity; but, instead, a kind of dogged impassiveness. He made no response, whatever. The stormy utterance of his father did not seem to affect him any more than if it had been the rumor of wind in the trees over head. Rising from the ground, where he had been sitting, with a piece of wood in his hand, which he was modeling into the form of a boat, he moved away with a loitering step. Not a sign beyond this was there that he had heard, understood, or intended to obey his father.

"Thirty minutes!" muttered Richard, as he walked along, as leisurely as if he had the day before him. "He knows I can't go in thirty minutes without running every step of the way there and back; and I'm not going to do it for him or anybody else. Let him flog me if he will. I won't stand it long."

Quick footsteps would have taken Richard to the end of his journey to a neighbor's house and back, in less than twenty-five minutes; but anger had awakened his anger, and harshly applied force a feeling of resistance.

"I'm not a dog to be kicked!" so he talked with himself, "or a mule to be driven. That's not the way to treat a boy. Flog me within an inch of my life! I wish he would kill me one of these days. Then he'd be—"

Richard could not utter the words that commenced forming on his tongue. A good impulse restrained him. He felt a little shocked at the wickedness of his thought. After this he walked on more briskly, as if to atone by obedience for the evil desire cherished for a moment in his heart. But his feet soon lingered again. There was no feeling mind in the boy. Propulsion, not attraction, moved him onward, and his was a nature prone to resist. On his way many attractive things presented themselves, and he stopped, here and there—sometimes in forgetfulness of his errand; sometimes in wilful disregard to his father's command—wasting the time and rendering punishment a thing next to certain.

Fully thirty minutes had expired when the boy reached his destination.

"Won't you step down to the post-office and mail this letter for me?—that's a good boy!" said a gentleman, to whom he had been sent with a message. The request was made in such a kind voice, and with such a pleasant smile, that Richard felt that he could go through fire and water, as the saying is, to oblige him.

"Certainly, sir," he replied in the most compliant manner, reaching out his hand for the letter. "I'll do it with the greatest pleasure."

"As well be killed for a sheep as a lamb," said the boy, as he took his way to the post-office. "The half hour's up, and the flogging earned. He can only take the other inch of my life at the worst, and then there'll be an end of it."

And he tried to whistle up a state of complete indifference; but the notes he sent out upon the listening air were not light and thought free, as the robin's warble, nor sweet and tender as the little yellow bird's song. The boy's mind was not at ease.

After depositing the letter, Richard sauntered away in a listless, indeterminate manner. Going home was not in his mind. There was an angry father there; and punishment awaited his return. He did not feel in the least inclined to meet the flogging within an inch of his life at an earlier moment than was absolutely necessary. A sight of the river which ran a short distance from the town, gave direction to his wavering thought; and off he started for the pleasant stream on whose bosom he loved to glide, bend-to the light-springing oar.

"You don't expect to see him in half an hour, of course," said a gentleman, who had been witness to the contest between the boy and his father, and who had not failed to notice the excited and baffled state of Mr. Somers' mind. Age, character, or relation gave him warrant for this free speech. It was not received as an intrusion, but in some deference of manner.

"He knows the penalty." Mr. Somers knit his brows severely. Cruel purposes drew his lips firmly together.

"Which you mean to inflict?"

"As surely as there is strength in this right arm!" and he stretched out the vigorous member.

"Even to within an inch of the boy's life?" A pair of calm eyes looked into the face of the angry father; a mild, rebuking voice was in his ear.

"I will bend or break him, sir. That is my duty. What hope is there for a willfully disobedient child?"

"Small hope, I fear," said the other.

"Then is not my duty plain?"

"There is no question as to your duty, in the abstract, being plain—the duty of securing submission from your child—but it is barely possible that you are not using the right means. Mrs. Howitt has expressed beautifully, in a single line, a truth that may help you to see some better way to reach the case. Do you remember it?"

Mr. Somers shook his head.

"For love hath readier will than fear."

"Love!" There was a spirit of rejection in the voice of Mr. Somers.

"We need not be unkind, austere,
For love hath readier will than fear."

The neighbor repeated the couplet in a low, emphatic voice, his tones lingering on the words that needed expression, so as to bring on the full meaning they had power to convey. The eyes of Mr. Somers fell away from his face. He showed a slight uneasiness of manner. His stern countenance relaxed something of its sternness.

"A homlier, but more strongly expressed form of the same sentiment, is given in the old proverb, made when language went to its meaning in the shortest way; 'Honey catches more flies than vinegar.' Now, friend Somers, having tried the vinegar for a good while, and with most discouraging results, let me suggest your resort to honey. In other words change your whole mode of discipline. Speak kindly, and in a low, firm voice to Richard, instead of in the bluff, imperative, querulous, or angry manner in which you almost always address him. Let him feel that you really love him; that there is a soft, warm, attachable side to your character, and, my word for it, he will move to your bidding with winged feet. I have studied the boy, and see in him good and noble qualities. But he has inherited from his father a certain impatience of control, and a will ever on the alert to resist unduly applied force. You may lead him, by love, anywhere; but, under the rule of fear, you will drive him, certainly, beyond your influence. Forgive my plain speech. I have wished to say this before, but, until now, saw no good opportunity."

The whole aspect of Mr. Somers underwent a change. Conviction struck to his heart. He saw that he had been unjust to the boy, unloving, unkind. Back to his own early days his thought went with a bound, and there came vivid remembrances of states into which he had been thrown by harsh treatment, states from which no punishment, however severe, could move him. Kindness had always been to his heart like melting sunshine; sternness like an icy wind. And Richard was like him. How strange that he had never thought of this before!

A long sigh quivered up from the oppressed heart of Mr. Somers.

"If I could only think so," he said. "But the obstinate self-will of the boy is so firmly inrooted."

"That you can never tear it up by force," spoke out his friend. "The only way is to weaken its vital currents, to cut off the flow of life, and let it wither for lack of sustenance, and die."

"Perhaps you are right," said Mr. Somers, in a troubled, uneasy way. "But what am I to do now? I gave him half an hour in which to do an errand; laid my commands on him, and enforced them by threats of punishment. Is my word to go for nought? Shall a boy defy me?"

A flash of anger gleamed over the father's face.

"Gently, patiently, forgivingly deal with the offender," replied the neighbor, as he laid his hand on the arm of Mr. Somers. "Let love rule, not anger. Is he all to blame? No. Does not the origin of the wrong lie most with yourself? Has it not grown out of your unwise discipline? Begin correction at the source. First get in a right attitude yourself, and then bring him right. As you provoked disobedience in the present case, restrain the punishing arm."

"But I shall forfeit my word."

"You will do that even if you punish."

"How so?"

"You will hardly go to within an inch of the boy's life. You were angry, and went beyond yourself. Take counsel of reason, now. Passion and pride are blind impulse, and sure to lead us from the right path. Think away from your unhappy relation to the unhappy boy, and let love for him prompt you to seek only his good. He is far off from you now; draw him near, even within a circle of a tenderly embracing arm. That is your duty my friend. Enter into it, and all will be well."

The neighbor, after saying this, retired, leaving Mr. Somers to the companionship of his own thoughts. There was now a weight of concern on the father's heart. Anger had gave place to a troubled feeling. He drew out his watch as the half hour period advanced to a close, looked at the time, and then from the window, anxiously. If Richard had appeared in the distance what a sense of relief it would have produced. But there was no sign of the returning boy.

"Willfully disobedient! Defiant!" The indignant man said this, as hot blood began to burn in his face. "Perverse, unhappy, wrongly governed boy!" This was the father speaking in reply, and struggling to hold anger in check.

The half hour expired. Richard was still away. Another half hour elapsed, and yet he was absent.

"He shall be punished for this!" said Mr. Somers, as indignation gained the mastery. Then a remembrance of the wise words spoken by his neighbor pressed back the tide of indignation; and he let pity move over the troubled surface of his feelings and calm them like oil.

A whole hour beyond the limit of time had passed. Mr. Somers was growing uneasy. It flashed across his mind that Richard, in a fit of anger, rebellion, and discouragement, might have been tempted to run off. He remembered very distinctly how, once, in his boyish troubles at home, he had meditated the same thing, and actually commenced preparations to abandon father and mother, and try his fortunes in the world.

At the end of the second hour, Mr. Somers was in a very anxious state; and he was about making preparation to go out in search of Richard, when, on glancing from the window, he saw him pass in a hurried, stealthy way. He stood, listening to hear him enter. The door opened, silently. Tip-toe steps sounded faintly along the passage. Mr. Somers followed them with his ears, but lost them on the stairs.

"What shall I do?" That was the difficult question for Mr. Somers. He stood for several minutes, trying to get his thoughts clear and his feelings calm. Thus far, his harsh methods had proved wholly fruitless. Threats and punishment wrought no salutary reform; the boy grew worse instead of better. Why this was so, clearer perception told him.

"Poor boy!" he said, with a sigh; and this very utterance of a sentiment of pity helped him to a more pitying state of mind. An image of fear and suffering, instead of hard defiance and reckless disobedience, took distinct form in his thoughts.

"Now is the time to reach him with gentleness and love." As Mr. Somers thus spoke with himself, he opened the door and went out into the passage.

"Did you see Richard?" he asked, speaking to a domestic who happened to be there at the moment.

"No sir;" she replied.

"I thought he came in just now."

"I did not notice him, sir."

Mr. Somers went to the foot of the stairway and called: "Richard!" Not harshly, but kindly.

No answer came.

"Richard!" His voice went up louder through the stairways and passages. But no sound, save echo, was returned

"I am certain he came in."

"It might have been some one else," suggested the domestic. "I haven't seen anything of him for two or three hours."

Mr. Somers went up stairs to the lad's room. The door was shut. He opened it and went in. Richard was lying on the bed. He did not stir, but lay crouching and motionless, like one exhausted from pain. His face was of an ashen hue. Mr. Somers noticed an expression of fear to sweep over it, as the boy's large, strangely bright eyes turned upon him. As he advanced across the room, the fear and shrinking changed to something like the anguish of terror."

"O father!" he said, imploringly, "don't—don't do it now!" and he lifted one arm as if to protect himself.

Mr. Somers understood him. The appeal and movement touched his feelings deeply.

"What ails you my son?" The father's voice was low, pitying, and full of tenderness.

Instantly the lines of fear died out of the boy's face. His lips quivered—tears came brimming to his eyes.

"My arm's broke!" he sobbed; and then the tears came raining over his cheeks.

"O Richard!" ejaculated Mr. Somers, as he placed his hand softly on the boy's forehead. "How did this happen?"

"I couldn't get back in half an hour, father, without running all the way; and I felt ugly here"—laying his hand on his heart—"and didn't try to go quickly. I went over the river, because I was afraid to come home; and fell from a pile of boards."

"Have you seen a doctor?" Mr. Somers inquired anxiously.

"Yes, sir. They took me to the doctor's and set my arm."

Mr. Somers bent over his child, with his hand tenderly pressed on his forehead for some moments, in silence; then, as his full heart overran in a current of emotion, he stooped and kissed him, murmurring: "My poor boy?"

Richard did not understand all his father meant by the exclamation; but he felt that pity, forgiveness, and love were in his heart; and these were more to him than his sufferings, for, in their warmth and consolation, he forgot his pain.

"O father!" he said, in a light falling on his pale countenance—"love me and I'll be good!"

"Oh, the power of love! Anger, rebuke, remonstrance, punishment—these are but elements of weakness in comparison. How like a sharp thrust from the sword of conviction was this cry for love, sent up to Mr. Somers from the heart of his wayward, self-willed, stubborn, resistant and defiant son!

"Richard." It was a month from the day on which the arm had been broken. "Richard, I want you to go down to Mr. Baird's for me right quickly.

The father spoke kindly, yet in a firm voice. Richard, who was reading, shut his book instantly, and coming to his father's side, with a cheerful—"Yes sir!"—stood looking at him, awaiting his message.

"Take this note to Mr. Baird and bring me an answer."

"Yes sir." And Richard took the note, and turning from his father, left his office with light and willing footsteps.

"Love hath readier will than fear!"

"Ah, good morning!" said Mr. Somers turning at the sound of a well known voice and smiling a pleasant welcome.

"I see you have found the better way," remarked the neighbor.

"Yes, thanks to your timely uttered admonition," was replied. "The better and the easier way. A harsh word seems to make leaden that boy's feet; while a kind word gives them the wind's lightness."

"If parents would only take this to heart," said the neighbor, "what a change would pass over thousands and thousands of troubled homes in our land! How easy would the government of children become! Love moves by a sweet transfusion of itself, electrically; but anger, sternness, and appeal to fear, rule only by the law governing where force is opposed to force. The stronger subdues the weaker, and there follows perpetual reactions, rebellions, and discord."

For the REPUBLICAN.

CARTERSVILLE, CASS CO., GA., Aug. 10th, 1871.

EDITORS REPUBLICAN.—

Gents:—I have been a resident of this county for more than two years and have seen many things in that time worthy of note, but not being a newspaper correspondent I have never sent any communication to the papers published in my dear old native county of Centre, in that grand old State Pennsylvania.

This is a progressive, law-abiding, healthy and quite a wealthy county in this the Empire State of the South; a good soil, well watered, well timbered, rich in minerals—gold, silver, copper and abundance of iron ores are found all through this section of Cherokee, Georgia. Thriving towns, pretty villages, good buildings, abound all through it. Good public roads—a vigorous road law makes them good.

The Atlantic and Western Railroad known as the State Road, runs through this county. The new Cherokee R. R., now completed to Rock Mart, in Polk county, connect here with the W. & A. R. R. It will soon be finished to Pryor Station on the Selma Rome and Dalton R. R. One hundred and fifty convicts from States prison are now at work on it from Rock Mart to Pryor Station. (By the way Pryor Station, Polk county, is where Mr. P. Van Cavender of Blair county, Pa, and others have built a fine Iron Furnace and are now in successful operation).

This is a limestone country. Some lands like all southern farms are somewhat worn out; but as farms are getting smaller, more attention is being paid to manures, and very good crops are being raised here—wheat, oats, corn, cotton, sweet potatoes, field beens and can peas being the principal crops. Barley and rye not being raised, cotton is the principal crop. It does not exhaust the soil so much, but it is a very tedious crop. Three times the average in clover is now sown that was when I came here two years ago.

Cartersville is situated in a very pretty valley and is a thriving town of about 3,000 inhabitants. The railroad runs directly through the town. There are many fine stores in the place, and an excellent steam flouring mill, just new, one planing mill, sash and door factory, &c., one car factory, one foundry and machine shop, one very poor hotel, a number of drinking saloons, one large carriage and wagon factory, a fine new Court House and a fine Jail in course of erection. A number of furnaces have been in operation near the town and also one large Rolling mill, but the war stopped them all, especially the Rolling mill, leaving hardly a trace of it. Two of the Furnaces are now in operation, and Mr. Hugh McNeal, from Blair Co., Pa., is now putting the old Barton Furnace (5 miles below Cartersville, directly on the railroad) into operation. It was all destroyed by the war, leaving nothing standing but the stack and one house. It was directly on the line of Sherman's great march from the mountains to the Sea.

There are but few Pennsylvanians here and few northern men, Mr. McNeal and ourselves being the only ones near the town, one from Michigan, who owns the foundry, and one from New York who bought a fine property just at the edge of town, Capt. Blaker, formerly of Schuylkill county, Pa., has lived here since the war, was Post master, but was turned out. He left here for Atlanta last Spring.

Most of the people here are very kind and clever, those that are mean and narrow-minded are as much so as any person in the world, of the same character.

Cassville, 7 miles north west from this place, was formerly the county seat, and had some very fine county buildings and two colleges (male and female), but it was destroyed and nothing was left of it but three churches to mark the place—not one single house left. It was one mile square and had about 1500 inhabitants.

Cartersville is two miles circle. A vote was taken, and Cartersville being on the railroad and making the heaviest bid for the county buildings, they were moved or rather rebuilt here.

Speaking of court houses brings me to the main object of my letter that was to let you know in regard to the trial of the Klu Klux Klan's just concluded and sentenced this morning. You never will know it from the county papers, they have never published it yet, not even their arrest, have had nothing in regard to their trial nor never will, and as there is some little doubts in the minds of many, whether there are such things, I thought as I had a few minutes leisure this afternoon, I would drop you these few lines. I have not the time nor ability to do justice to this part of the country nor to note all things worthy of note, and therefore, pass hastily over matters.

We have a fine bar here and some of the best lawyers I ever heard any where, the strictest Judge and one who goes for criminals or offenders against the law in a hurry. We have good juries and a law-abiding people, as I said before; but is a large county, and like all others in the South, more or less crimes will be committed. Judge J. R. Parrott, is our judge. He resides here. Our principal lawyers are Col. J. W. Woffard, Gen. W. T. Woffard, Col. Warren Akin, Pravates, A. P. Woffard, Thomas Wilner, John Cox, and others of lesser note, of this place, and Judge Walker and Judge J. A. W. Johnston, of Dalton.

There are few privates in this country nearly all persons have titles.

This was an adjourned term of court. One man (white) was convicted of murder in the first degree for killing his child in attempting to shoot his wife. Sentenced to be hung the 29th of Sept. One man (black) convicted of manslaughter—killing a white man by striking him over the head with a gun. Sentenced 10 years in States prison; but the whole interest seemed to center in the trial of the K. K. K. For many reasons they are the only ones that have ever been tried in this part of the country and the murder they committed was so cowardly, so brutal, and the way they were found, so peculiar and so providential, that it caused much interest, although there were many sympathizers yet the majority of the people were on the side of right and justice. They were brought to a speedy trial and a punishment, that will strike terror to others. The circumstances were as follows:

On the morning of the 2d day of June, 1871, a negro named George Wright, and a white man named J. C. Garrison, had some little difficulty at Cora's saw mill when Garrison drew a knife and cut the negro in 5 places, sending him home to his bed. Between 9 and 12 o'clock the same night, six men named in the order of their crime—Samuel Glover, Thos. Evins, John Countryman, Robert Harris, Henry Drummond, and one more whose name I cannot now recall, started out, picking up on the way, two others named Walter Beddenfield and Jack Wade. They proceeded as far as an old field near the scene of the tragedy and three of them produced and put on disguises. The sixth one merely blacked his face at an old stump, took Beddenfield's cap and turned it wrong side out. They there, in presence of these two men, called over the names of each. They then produced the musket that did the deed. They went to a bridge within a quarter of a mile of Wright's house and there stopped. Beddenfield and Wade remained there, the others seperated to pass Dodd's mill, proceeded to a house at which Garrison boarded, called up the family, took Garrison along a few feet, asked him several questions in presence of Mr. Hardy, let him go, proceeded on a short distance further, sent one of the number for some whiskey, he came back, they, then, with a scantling busted in the door and went up to his bed. He called for mercy. Glover put the gun to his heart and pulled the trigger. Wright made one leap and fell about ten feet into another room across the feet of his wife and on his face, dead. Two others were in the house (two men) besides his wife. One staid, the other ran away and has never came back yet. They were black people. Countryman was the last man to leave the house. He felt the negroes feet and found them stiff and cold, as he remarked, when he came back to the party. They then went back to the bridge where they had left the other two, Beddenfield and Wade there says one, Countryman was a bold fellow to break down the door. "Yes," says another, "Sam Glover was a brave man to pull the trigger," and Countryman says, "I was the last man to leave the house, he was lying on his face and his feet was stiff and cold.

Countryman, Garrison, Wade, Beddenfield, Drummond and Harris were arrested, an examination was had, all were committee for trial except Garrison and Wade who were out on bail. Beddenfield and Wade being forced along, turned states evidence, and Garrison was discharged, leaving countryman, Drummond and Harris to be tried. Glover and Evins were never arrested, they having escaped.

On last Monday, 7th they began the trial. Forty-eight jurors were summoned. I was among the rest. Having heard part of the evidence and of course had formed an opinion, and expressed it, too, I was not taken for which I was thankful.

The witnesses were examined for the prosecution. The defence examined not a single one. They did not even attempt to prove alibi. They were all tried together-their own choice. They had able counsel—Col. John W. Wofford and Thomas Milner, from Cartersville, and Thomas Dodd from Cedar Town. The prosecution had Col. A. Johnston, Gen. W. S. Wofford and A. P. Wofford, of this place, Solicitor Gen. Broybe and Judge J. A. W. Johnston, of Dalton. Every thing was done for them that could be done. The jury last night returned a verdict of guilty, with a recommendation to mercy which, in this country, means States prison for life. This morning Judge Parrot pronounced the sentence upon them States prison for life instead of hanging them. Two of them are married, one single; but they are all young men. They seemed considerably affected when the sentence was passed upon them. Their families were here and were much affected. Thus ends the case.

The authorities are looking for Glover and Evins, and when caught, will no doubt, be tried and hung, as they were the principals in the affair. Had they been here and tried with the others they would all have been hung.

I do not think there is any organized band of Ku Klux in this part of the country, and if there is, this will effectually break them up.

One band came here, three nights in succession, after John Lebkecher, formerly of Bellefonte scaring him about to death, but did no damage. It was about the time these others were arrested. They never came back and have not been heard of since.

Not wishing the thing to go out to the world, our papers will not publish the matter in full.

At, or near Cross-plains, Godsden and Cedar Bluff, in Alabama, there are plenty to my own knowledge, but not in this section of Georgia.

I hope to get to Bellefonte some time this fall and will then, more fully, tell you about this country. I often get your paper, also the Watchman, and when I do I always hand them to Editors of the papers here and they are much pleased with them. We have two papers here—"Express" semi-weekly—"Standard" (weekly)—both Democratic.

Yours &c.

SECRET OF SUCCESS.—A merchant who, from being a very poor boy, had risen to wealth and renown was once asked by an intimate friend to what he attributed his success in life.

"To prompt and steady obedience to my parents," was the reply. "In the midst of many bad examples of youths of my own age, I was always able to yield a ready submission to the will of my father and mother, and I firmly believe that a blessing has, in consequence, rested upon me and upon all my efforts."

The lady whose blood curdled in her veins, has ever since been very sour in her disposition.

The Bible, like nature, has something for every class of mind.

The Lesson of Life.

Of all the lessons of life humanity has to learn, the hardest is to learn to wait. Not to wait with folded hands that claim life's prizes without previous effort, but having struggled and crowded the slow years with trial, and see no result as effort seems to warrant—nay, perhaps disaster instead. To stand firm on such a crisis of existence, tc preserve one's self-poise and self-respect, not to lose hold or relax effort, this is greatness, whether achieved by man or woman—whether the eye of the world notes it, or it is recorded in the book, which the light of eternity shall alone make clear to the vision.—Those who stand on the high places of the earth, understand not what necessity, what suffering means. They know not what it is to a noble mind to be obliged, like the worms, to crawl upon the earth for nourishment, because it has not the strength to endure famine.—Life moves around them with so much grace, splendor and beauty; they drink life's sweetest wine, and dance in charming intoxication.—They find nothing within them which can enable them to understand the real sufferings of the poor, they love only themselves, and look at mankind only in their own narrow circle.

JUST SO.—The effeminate man, says Figaro, is a weak poultice.—He is a cross between table beer and ginger-pop, with the cork left out; a fresh water mermaid found in a cow pasture, with her hands filled with dandelions. He is a tea cup full of syllabub; a kitten in trousers; a sick monkey with a blonde moustache. He is a vine without any tendrils, a fly drowned in oil; a paper kite in a dead calm. He lives like a butterfly—nobody can tell why He is as harmless as a pennyworth of sugar candy, and as useless as a shirt button without a hole. He is as lazy as a slug, and has no more hope than a last year's summer fly. He goes through life on tiptoe, and dies like cologn water spilt over the ground.

NATURES VOICE.—Nature will be reported. All things are engaged in writing their history. The plant and the pebble go attended by their shadow. The rolling rock leaves its scratches on the mountain side; the river its channels in the soil; the animal its bones in the stratum; the fern leaf its modest epitaph in the coal. The falling drop makes sepulchre in the sand or stone; not a foot step into or along the ground but prints its characters more or less lasting, a maa of its mrrch, every act of the man inscribes itself ou the members of its fellows, and in his own face. The air is full of sound—the signatures; and every object is covered with hints that speak to the intelligent.

A MOTHER'S LOSS.—The loss of a mother is always severely felt.—Even though her health may incapacitate her from taking any active part in the care of her family, still she is a sweet rallying point, around which affections and obedience and a thousand tender endeavors to please, concentrate, and dreary is the blank when such a point is withdrawn. It is like that lonely star before us—neither its heat or its light are anything to us in themselves, yet the shepherd would feel his heart sad if he missed it when he lifts his eye to the brow of the mountain over which it rises when the sun descends.

HADES.—The temperature of the earth is supposed to increase at the rate of about one degree (Fahr.) for every 15 yards of descent. The probability is, though, that a more extended and accurate series of observations, when attempted, will demonstrate that the increase is in geometrical progression: According to the current rule, water boils at the depth, in the earth, of 2,480 yards; lead melts at 8,499; there is a red heat at seven miles; gold melts at 21; cast iron at 74, and soft iron at 97 miles. This would give flued fire, so to speak, at a depth of one hundred miles. Rather an unpleasant contemplation.

LABOR.—It is to labor, and labor only, that man owes everything possessed of an exchangeable value. Labor is the talisman that has raised him from the condition of the savage; that has changed the desert and forest into cultivated fields; that has covered the earth with cities, and the ocean with ships; that has given us plenty, comfort and elegancc, instead of want, misery and barbarism.

AN original way of answering two questions at a time. "Here, Biddy, my darlin,' what's the time o'night, and where's the pertaty pudding?" It's eight, sir."

Kinsman.

For this hearty English word, full of manhood and warm blood, elegant people have forced upon us two very vague, misty substances—relation and connection. By the use of the latter words in place of the former, nothing is gained, and much is lost. Both of them are very general terms. Men have relations of various kinds, and connections are of still wider distribution. Even in regard to friends it is impossible to give these words exactness of meaning, whereas a man's kinsmen are only those of his blood. His cousin is his kinsman, but his brother-in-law is not. Yet relation is made to express both connections, one of blood and the other of law. In loosing the kinsmen we loose all his frank, sweet-liped sister, kinswoman, and are obliged to give her place to that poor, meally-mouthed, ill-made-up latin interloper, female relation

LITTLE ACCURACIES.—There must be detail in every great work. It is an element of effectiveness which no reach of plan, no enthusiasm of purpose, can dispense with. Thus, as if man conceived the idea of becoming eminent in learning, but cannot toil through the million of little drudgeries necessaay to carry him on, his learning will soon be told. Accurate and caretul detail, the minding of common occasions and small things, combined with general scope and vigor, is the secret of all efficiency and success in the world.

NEARLY six hundred thousand seals have been taken into the various ports of Newfoundland the past season, the "catch" being valued at $1,800,000. Two vesels alone brought in eighty-two thousand seals. All this wealth has been secured without any very considerable expenditure of time; money, or trouble.

CHANGE OF CONDITION.—Twenty years ago Leland Stanford arrived in California with "only one shirt to his back." Since then, by managing always to retain a situation, and by close attention to business, he has contrived to accumulate a trifle of $10,000,000.

WHEN you hear a man say:—"Life is but a dream," tread on his corns and wake him up. Life is real.

WHAT proof have we that there was sewing in the time of David? He was hemmed in on every side.

A crusty old bachelor says he thinks it is a woman and not her wrongs, that ought to be redressed.

Hair Vigor,

For restoring Grey Hair to its natural Vitality & Color.

A dress which is at once agreeable, healthy, and effectual for preserving the hair, Fresh or gray hair is restored to its original color, with the gloss and freshness of youth. Thin hair is thickened, falling hair checked, and baldness often, though not always cured by its use. Nothing can restore the hair where the follicles are destroyed, or the glands atrophied and decayed. But such as remain can be saved for usefulness by this application. Instead of fouling the hair with a pasty sediment, it will keep it clean and vigorous. Its occasional use will prevent the hair from turning gray or falling off, and consequently prevent baldness. Free from those deleterious substances which make some preparation dangerous and injurious to the hair, the Vigor can only benefit but not harm it. If wanted merely for a nothing else can be found so desirable. Containing neither oil nor dye, it does not soil white cambric, and yet lasts long on the hair, giving it a rich glossy lustre and a grateful perfume.

HAIR DRESSING,

REPUBLICAN STATE TICKET.

FOR AUDITOR GENERAL,

DAVID STANTON,

OF BEAVER COUNTY.

FOR SURVEYOR GENERAL,

ROBERT B. BEATH,

OF SCHUYLKILL COUNTY.

AN APPEAL TO THE REPUBLICANS OF PENNSYLVANIA.

Republicans of Pennsylvania, you are upon the eve of another momentous struggle in the interests of good government and the sacred rights of man.

Your struggles and sacrifices in the past, are proud monuments in your history, and the achievements of your noble sons have not been less conspicuous in peace, for the maintainance and furtherence of Republican principles, than their costly and sanguinary efforts to preserve, in war, the life of the nation itself.

None will gainsay, for a moment, your wonderful aptitude in organization, and your intelligent and forceful application of great principles in the accomplishment of triumphant and palpable victories. But remember that the victory is not always to the strong, nor the race to the swift; and if personal animosities are to be tolerated in certain localities, and languor and apathy are to pervade the ranks in general, then defeat will be as sure as that the enemy are watching your weaknesses in order to gain possession of your stronghold.

You have the same old enemy to fight—a foe eminently worthy of your steel. It has assumed new disguises, but only for the purpose of enacting the Role of its old infamies. It has made a temporary compromise of some of its heresies—ignored for a season some of the damnable dogmas of its past creed, but it has been actuated by no purposes of reform, no honest convictions of patriotic duty. Its only aspiration is for power and when once invested therewith, its pledges and promises and covenants will be violated with as much pomp and ceremony as has attended their empty declaration. It would tear down your school houses, for its tenets are held in better repute by the ignorant and degraded. It would despoil the monuments you have erected all along the pathway of the nation's advancement, for all its memories are in the obsolete past; it dare not face the splendors of the living present.

It would build an aristocracy of caste, with the blasted hopes and lost manhood o fits deluded adherents as the only foundation of the foul superstructure. It would build a monarchy of church and proclaim a vicegerent upon earth, with plenary powers, and subvert the whole machinery of STATE to his solemn arbitrament, here in this boasted land of civil and religious liberty if it could thereby subserve its purposes of power and secure its attending emoluments. It is pledged against all the organizations projected and prosecuted for the benefit of the human race. on this continent, against your banking system which has given you a currency, to which, it would seem, no honest objection could be raised against the reduction of the national debt, and against the acts of reconstruction. All this is but a dim outline of the terrible consequences of Democratic enthronement in power.

And yet while the air is resonant with the cries of victory in the very strongholds of the South; while in the States where treason was once so rampant and adherence to Republican principles the very synonym of death, the people seem to be coming back to the condition of honest men and good citizens, the word goes out from the Old Keystone, that on account of local differences and personal animosities the hopes of Republican success are imperiled.

North Carolina has been saved and Kentucky almost redeemed, while you, with an unacceptionable ticket in the field, with men of true and tried experience in place, and unswerving patriotism and valor in war, as your standard bearers in the coming conflict—with Democratic papers in the State preaching the heresy of free trade, and striving to undermine the system of your magnificent industries, with all your proud history in the crucible, your unequaled resources hazarded and your grand future imperiled, under some improbable pretext of wounded State pride—dissentions as to respective merits of different leaders, or blasted hopes of personal political preferment, you would barter away your chances for victory and lose your standing among the loyal States of the Union.

Republicans of Pennsylvania, the loyal people of the whole country look to you for better things. The whole disloyal element both North and South, is watching every breach that is made in your ranks, and straining every resource in its power to widen it.

There is but the one alternative. Your victory will be in the interest of liberty and loyalty, your defeat, in the interest of treason, wickedness and corruption, and may lead to the shedding of blood.

Republicans of Pennsylvania gird on your armor, close up the ranks, bury for ever all personal animosities, and march forward to certain and sure victory. Do your whole duty as intelligent freemen and patriots, and a glorious triumph, a saved and prosperous country will be your reward.

ONLY ONE FLAG.

In his speech at St. Louis, Senator Morton stated the coming question in politics to be between the choice of a republican and democratic President, and pledged himself to support the candidate of the republican national convention, "whether he be Greeley, Sumner, Trumbull or Grant." That is the right spirit. The republican party is not a personal organization and recognizes no personal chief. In its history of fifteen years it has had several standard-bearers and various men have been designated by it for special service. Fremont led the advance of 1856, and the party moved on beyond him and at last in spite of him. Seward long spoke the word of positive opposition to slavery, but republican sentiment outran him and uttered the fiat which he hesitated to proclaim. Lincoln accepted the obligations which Providence placed upon him, but the great heart of the country beat quicker and higher than his, and he followed rather than lead. In the war, one general succeeded another, but the army rallied under one flag. No mere personality controls the republican party now. The profound convictions which forbade the domination of slavery; the faith and courage which carried it through the war; the discretion with which it met the problems of reconstruction, and the stern frugality which overcame the prevalent drift to extravagance, cut down the expenses of the government and reduced the taxes while the debt has been rapidly paid, still distinguish the organization. These are the ligatures which hold the members together. The same principles, the same high purposes, the same enlightened humanity which dictated the measures and the policy of the party in the past, will dictate them in the future.

All of the men whom Senator Morton names, have been conspicuous in the achievement of the republican party. Each has done work that probably no one else could have done so well. In the fasces of republican strength each has an important place, and all of them are requisite to its perfection. We have had occasion to differ from each of them. For all of them we have the respect which their character, ability and fidelity to principle have inspired and justified. As editor of the New York Tribune, Horace Greeley can have no competitor; as a constitutional lawyer Senator Trumbull may defy comparison with the rest; and Senator Sumner has a place in the records of the struggle against slavery, which will not be taken from him. Should the republican national convention select either of them as its candidate for President, we would support him with all the zeal and force at our command.

Because we believe the preference of thoughtful men in the party, and the necessities of the situation, point clearly and unequivocally to General Grant for renomination and re-election, it seems only fair to us that factious warfare with the aim to weaken him before the people, should be stopped. As he is now the President chosen by the party and the nation, he is entitled to consideration. As he is becoming more and more obviously the standard-bearer, representing the cause in the future as well as the present, assault upon him, falls upon the flag which he bears. The opposition made by Tammany Hall is not to him; it is to the measures perpetuating the triumphs of the war, to the whole policy of reconstruction, to the establishment of free labor and equal rights, to that appeal to morality which is the basis of republican success. Grant is identified with those measures and that policy; the success of the administration of which he is the head, is the glowing fact of our finance and diplomacy, and of our domestic progress. We need to extend the same sort of work, to go forward in reducing taxes and paying the debt, and in the elevation of the civil service; and the completion of the beneficient achievements of reconstruction. The workman who so far has been faithful and efficient, is required to finish the labor. The common sense of the nation turns more and more strongly to the re-election of Grant. The old flag is in his hands, and to them it is likely to be again committed.

The pretexts of opposition to his renomination, are all based on one consideration; patronage. However the plea is made, it comes back to that. Somebody has not received a petty place, or somebody else has been appointed. Men are sensitive, and like power, and all seek the first seat. But it is always true that when two ride on one horse, one must surely ride behind. Within decent limits controversies for appointments will be likely to occur. It is certain that no person and no faction that makes spoils a condition of party fidelity, ought to be encouraged How the names of office-holders are spelled, is of little account. Good men and true should be selected, not because they wear any personal badge, but because they are republicans and are honest and competent and deserving. Unless we can subordinate strife for spoils to the inspiring purpose of the triumph of the cause, no censure can be too severe for the factionists.

The republican standard is broad enough to include beneath its folds all who recognize that the abolition of slavery, the preservation of the republic, and the reconstruction of the South, involve pledges to the future of service which to neglect will be gross infidelity, and which only the republican party can render to the nation and to humanity. Only that one flag can represent the cause, and all who will serve it must rally under its folds. Men must bear the standard. That is all. He should do it who can do it best. It is the one flag that is of supreme consequence.—Utica Herald.

WHO ARE ENTITLED TO BOUNTY LANDS.—The Commissioner of Pensions will soon issue instructions and new regulations for procuring bounty land warrants through that office. The following instructions will be of interest to many:

The acts of Congress now in force granting bounty land, entitle each of the surviving persons in the following classes to a certificate or warrant for such quantity of land as shall make, in the whole, with what he may have heretofore received, 160 acres, provided he shall have served a period of not less than fourteen days, to wit:

I. Commissioned and non-commissioned officers, musicians and privates, whether of the regulars, volunteers, rangers, or militia, who were regularly mustered into the service of the United States in any of the wars in which this country has been engaged since 1790 and prior to March 3, 1855, to wit:

II. Commissioned and non-commissofficers, seamen, ordinary seamen, flotillamen, marines, clerks and landsmen in the navy in any of the said wars.

III. Militia, volunteers, and State troops of any State or Territory called into military service, and regularly mustered therein, and whose services have been paid by the United States.

IV. Wagonmasters and teamsters who have been employed under the direction of competent authority, in time of war, in the transportation of military stores and supplies.

V. Officers and soldiers of the Revolutionary war, and marines, seamen, and other persons in naval service of the United States during that war.

VI. Chaplains who served with the army in the several wars of this country.

VII. Volunteers who served with the armed forces of the United States in any of the wars mentioned, subject to military orders whether regularly mustered into the service of the United States or not.

Each of the surviving persons in the following classes are entitled to a like certificate for like quantity of land, without regard to the length of the service (provided he was regularly mustered into service), to wit:

1. Officers and soldiers who have been actually engaged in any battle in any of the wars in which this country has been engaged prior to the war of the rebellion.

2. Those volunteers who served at the invasion of Plattsburg, in September, 1814.

3. The volunteers who served at the battle of King's Mountain, in the revolutionary war.

4. The volunteers who served at the battle of Nickojack against the Confederate savages of the South.

5. The volunteers who served at the attack on Lewiston, in Delaware, by the British fleet in the war of 1812.

In addition to these classes these acts also extend to all Indians who served the United States in any of their wars prior to the war of the rebellion, the provisions of this and all the bounty land laws heretofore passed, in the same manner and to the same extent as if the Indians had been white men.

Where the service has been rendered by a substitute, he is the person entitled to the benefits of these acts, and not his employer.

In the event of the death of any person who, if living, would be entitled to a certificate or warrant as aforesaid, leaving a widow, or, if no widow, such minor child or children, is entitled to a certificate or warrant for the same quantity of land such deceased persons would be entitled to receive under the provisions of said acts if now living.

A subsequent marriage will not impair the right of any such widow to such warrant if she be a widow at the time of her application. Persons within the age of 21 years on the 3d day of March, 1855, are deemed minors within the intent and meaning of said acts.

THE "Song Messenger," for August, published by Root & Cady, Chicago, Ill., is on our table. It contains several pieces of choice music, sheet size, besides much useful and instructive reading matter.

TERMS:—One year $1,00; 12 copies one year $10,00; single copies 10 cents.

THE MONTHLY NOVELETTE FOR SEPTEMBER.—The Monthly Novelette is growing better and better with age. The September number is now before us, and is full of interesting reading, choice stories, rare sea-yarns, and one of M. Quad's thrilling campaign stories, relating the adventures of Connecticut soldiers during the late civil war. Here is the list of contents, so that it will be seen what a variety can always be found in The Monthly Novelette: 'Mother and Daughter;' "Saved by a Child;" 'The Swing;' "The Merchant of Marseilles;" 'Hunting down an Heiress;' 'Ransomed;' 'Were they Rivals?' "Sunshine and Shadow;' "The Baronet's Daughter;" "Henry the Eighth;" "To our Etty;" "To Die in Peace;" 'Homeward Bound; "A Brave Woman;" "The Robbers of the Black Pool;" "Marat;" 'Quarter-Day Our Juvenile Department—"A False Step: or, The Fortunes and Misfortunes of Fred Wilder;" "Charley;' 'Anecdotes Wit and Humor." Price, $2.00 per year—20 cents per number. Send 15 cents for specimen copies to Thomas & Talbot, 63 Congress Street, Boston.

DELICACIES.—One of the special delicacies of modern times may be accounted Speer's Port Grape Wine, which combines with rare purity and nicety of flavor the good qualities of port and claret; it is neither insipid nor bitter, but hits the happy medium most to be desired in a constant beverage or in a drink for the sick. For invalids it is invaluable by virtue of its tonic qualities, and particularly its absolute freedom from all adulterations. Actual trial will show that Speer's Port Grape Wine has excellence of its own unrivalled by any other wine in the maket.—New-Yorker.

From the Beaver Radical.

Morrow B. Lowry and the Rocky Mountain Cat.

Jim Stewart, sometimes called "The Commodore," is the most noted darkey in Erie. Jim is a good natured, shrewd sort of fellow, somewhat addicted to doing business now and then on the Jeremy Diddler style, as the following incident will testify. Living near the residence of the Hon. Morrow B Lowry, he was frequently employed by the latter to do odd jobs around the house and in the garden. One day Mrs. Lowry concluded that the peccadillos of a worthless and venerable tom cat, long an attache of the family, were such as demanded the infliction of capital punishment, and Jim was called upon to play the part of executioner. After a long chase, the victim was captured and put in a basket over which an old shawl was securely fastened. The next question was, how to dispose of the prisoner. Mrs. L. suggested drowning, but Jim, with tears in his eyes, protested that he could no more drown "that ere cat" than he could "drown his self," that were he to do so, his conscience, acting on a naturally tender heart, would trouble him so much at nights that he was sure he could never sleep a wink thereafter. Not wishing to ruin Jim's peace of mind, Mrs. L. compromised the matter by giving him a dollar and directing him to take the cat and dispose of it in any way he pleased, so that she should never see it again. Putting the dollar in his pocket and the basket on his arm, Jim started down town. He had not got out of sight of the house, when he met Morrow walking leisurely toward his home, and the following colloquy ensued:

MORROW—Hello, Jim, what have you got there?

JIM—One ob de celebrated Rocky Mountain cats, sah.

MORROW—A Rocky Mountain cat! Why Jim, where did you get him, and what are you going to do with him!

JIM—I golly, sah! Didn't you heah ob de big bunch ob dem cats dat kum to town yesterday from Kaliforny, sah? Bes mousers in de wurl, sah, and dis is de biggest and bes one ob de lot, sah. Dey are gwine to gib me foah dollahs fur him at de Reed House, sah.

MORROW—(Recollecting the "general cussedness" of the family cat) Jim, we want a good cat up home, and I guess I'll take this fellow, but—but—don't you think four dollars is mighty steep for a cat?

JIM—All de res' sold for five dollahs sah.

This decided Morrow, so he paid Jim the price asked, and told him to carry the "Rocky Mountain cat" up to Mrs. Lowry. Jim, however, had very important business elsewhere, and begged Morrow to take the basket himself, which the latter good naturedly consented to do. Arriving at home he took his prize into the sitting room, carefully closed the doors, slightly lifted the basket and covering, and smiling benevolently at Mrs. L.'s apparent astonishment, remarked: "My dear, I've brought you a Rocky Mountain cat—the best mouser"—at this moment the cat jumped out of the basket and commenced rubbing himself against his master's legs. Morrow stopped short, while his wife broke in impatiently: La me, Morrow! Why that's the same old cat I gave Jim Stewart a dollar to drown, not more than ten minutes ago."

What followed we know not, but a few minutes later the Hon. Morrow B. Lowry might have been noticed on the streets of Erie, armed with a very heavy walking stick, and wondering "why a man can never find that d—d nigger, when he wants to see him badly."

Marriage Outfits.

In our days, hearts and darts, living on loving, dying for one another, and all that sort of thing, is "played out;" ausgespielt, as our German friends so accurately and idiomatically express it. We want a solid foundation to build matrimony on; blocks of bullion, and cement of greenbacks, and supports of bonds, and girders of stock. None of your ethereal castles in the air will answer for our modern ladies of fashion.

Chateaus en Espagne are airy residences, and not suited to a Northern climate with the thermometer at zero in the sun in winter, and ninety in the shade in summer. The fiance of the present prefers bricks and mortar if they are more prosaic. Cottages can no longer be erected in this city under our fire laws, and lodges in vast wildernesses will do well enough in summer when the play of catching trout and hunting deer is being enacted, but will not accommodate a modern ball or give room for the German.

Our girls are not brought up to save; not they. Spending is their strong point, and in that we will back them against the world. An average American wife will get through more money than any female representative of any nation on the earth; and if our wives cannot ruin their husbands, nothing can. They hate account books and despise arithmetic, and know that it is low to go into the kitchen or look after the servants. Their fathers have worked for them all their younger days without limiting their expenditures. Why should not the husband follow this excellent example? It was only the other day that a fashionable lady sent her sapphire engagement ring, just given her by her lover, to a jeweler to be valued, and when she found it was a "doublet," actually a sham, or at least half a sham, and only worth three hundred dollars, she dismissed her lover ignominiously. She foresaw what such economy meant. She was to have "doublets" tried on her at every turn. Her furniture would be a sham, and cheap; her horses poor and ugly; her house in a side street, and not on the avenue her dresses, American silk, and made by third-rate milliners; her jewels mean pearls of common garnets; her carriage second hand perhaps.—Horrors! Was she not sensible in putting an extinguisher on such possibilities? "Save for thee," indeed! Why, where is the fun? Husbands are not engaged on those conditions, and their priviliges are limited while their duties are plainly defined.

Weight of People.

The average returns show that a citizen of the world, on the first appearance in public, weighs about six pounds and a half; a boy baby a little more, a girl baby a little less. Some very modest babies hardly turn the scale with two pounds and a half, while other pretentious youngsters boast of ten or eleven pounds. When Shylock asked for his "pound of flesh," he asked for an equivalent to a little less than the sixth of a baby. How the tiny one grows during childhood we need not trace here; but it may be interesting to know that girls and boys of twelve years of age are nearly equal in weight; after which limit males are heavier than females of the same age. Young men of twenty average a hundred and forty-three pounds each, while the young women of twenty average a hundred and twenty pounds. Men reach their heaviest bulk at about thirty-five, when their average weight is about a hundred and fifty-two pounds; but the women slowly fatten until fifty, when their average is a hundred and twenty-nine pounds. Men and women together, their weight at full growth averages about twenty times as heavy as they were on the first day of their existence. Of course averages were formed from men ranging from a hundred and eighty to two hundred and twenty pounds, and women from eighty-eight to two hundred and seven pounds. The actual weight of human nature, taking all ages and conditions—nobles, clergy, tinkers, tailors, maidens, boys, girls and babies, all included—the average weight is almost one hundred pounds, avoirdupois, for each human being; a quantity easy to remember, at any rate.

WHICHEVER direction a man may take in the other world, neither gold nor greenbacks can do him any service. Upward they are worthless, and downward they would not be found fireproof.

NEW USE FOR BALLOONS.—MR. Ferguson of Front street, goes home drunk for the fortieth time, and his wife holds up her hands with vexation and indignation.

"Don' sa'er word, 'Liza (hic)—don' sa'er word; I'm goin' to buy a balloon (hic,) bloom."

"What on earth are you going to buy a balloon for, Mr. Ferguson?"

"I tell you (hic,) 'Liza. Y'see they'ves gossomany (hic,) got s' many rum shopt 'long Montgomery street, a fellow can' get home without gettin' drunk. I can get away with a balloon (hic,) you know. You can come to the store an' blow it up, an' (hic,)—an' then you won't have to blow me up."

REAL VALUE OF MONEY.—What is a man's wealth to him when he is racked and tormented with aches and pains? Many a rich man would give all his piles of gold for one night's sleep. Nay, money stands to him in lieu of health, since he sacrificed health for the sake of obtaining money which cannot assuage one pang, nor lessen one mischief, nor comfort one heart-break, nor supply one affection.

WITHIN twelve years the citizens of New Haven alone have given to Yale College $900,000; exclusive of this amount $300,000 has been given for special departments; and other gifts have amounted to $240,000, so that, in all, $1,440,000 has been given.

Medical.

The Great Medical Discovery!
Dr. WALKER'S CALIFORNIA
VINEGAR BITTERS,
Hundreds of Thousands
Bear testimony to their Wonderful Curative Effects,
WHAT ARE THEY?

They are a Gentle Purgative as well as a Tonic, possessing the peculiar merit of acting as a powerful agent in relieving Congestion or Inflammation of the Liver, and all the Visceral Organs.
FOR FEMALE COMPLAINTS, whether in young or old, married or single, at the dawn of womanhood, or at the turn of life, these Tonic Bitters have no equal. Send for a circular.
THEY ARE NOT A VILE
FANCY DRINK,
Made of Poor Rum, Whiskey, Proof Spirits and Refuse Liquors doctored, spiced and sweetened to please the taste, called "Tonics," "Appetizers," "Restorers," &c., that lead the tippler on to drunkenness and ruin, but are a true Medicine, made from the Native Roots and Herbs of California, free from all Alcoholic Stimulants. They are the GREAT BLOOD PURIFIER and LIFE GIVING PRINCIPLE a perfect Renovator and Invigorator of the System, carrying off all poisonous matter and restoring the blood to a healthy condition. No person can take these Bitters according to direction and remain long unwell.
For Inflammatory and Chronic Rheumatism and Gout, Dyspepsia or Indigestion, Bilious, Remittent and Intermittent Fevers, Diseases of the Blood, Liver, Kidneys, and Bladder, these Bitters have been most successful. Such Diseases are caused by Vitiated Blood, which is generally produced by derangement of the Digestive Organs.
DYSPEPSIA OR INDIGESTION.
Headache, Pain in the Shoulders, Coughs, Tightness of the Chest, Dizziness, Sour Eructations of the Stomach, Bad taste in the Mouth, Bilious Attacks, Palpitation of the Heart, Inflammation of the Lungs, Pain in the regions of the Kidneys, and a hundred other painful symptoms, are the offsprings of Dyspepsia.
They invigorate the Stomach and stimulate the torpid liver and bowels, which render them of unequalled efficacy in cleansing the blood of all impurities, and imparting new life and vigor to the whole system.
FOR SKIN DISEASES, Eruptions, Tetter, Salt Rheum, Blotches, Spots, Pimples, Pustules, Boils, Carbuncles, Ring-Worms, Scald-Head, Sore Eyes, Erysipelas, Itch, Scurfs, Discolorations of the Skin, Humors and Diseases of the Skin, of whatever name or nature, are literally dug up and carried out of the system in a short time by the use of these Bitters. One bottle in such cases will convince the most incredulous of their curative effects.
Cleanse the Vitiated Blood whenever you find its impurities bursting through the skin in Pimples, Eruptions or Sores; cleanse it when you find it obstructed and sluggish in the veins; cleanse it when it is foul, and your feelings will tell you when. Keep the blood pure and the health of the system will follow.
PIN, TAPE and other WORMS, lurking in the system of so many thousands, are effectually destroyed and removed. For full directions, read carefully the circular around each bottle.

at 1 o'clock, P. M., to place in nomination a ticket to be supported at the ensuing October election, and to transact such other business as may bedeemed necessary.

HOME NEWS.

A FINE Selection of Pocket Books just received and will be sold low—at the Model Book-store.

MALICIOUS MISCHIEF.—On last Sunday night some maliciously disposed person, shot a fine horse belonging to S. Y. Lucas, Esq., of Snow Shoe township. The horse was in the pasture field and was shot a little below the knee in one of his legs. The horse had to be killed.

AID THE SCHOOL.—Shilo Sunday School will give a musical entertainment for the benefit of the school, on Saturday evening, Sept. 9th. A few short addresses and essays, general exercises, together with the vocal and instrumental music will constitute the programme. 34-2t

THE Fire in Williamsport, Pa., on Sunday night, Aug. 20th, involves a loss of about $300,000. The heaviest sufferer is the estate of ex-Governor Packer, which loses $55,000, but partially insured; the next is the Mulberry street Methodist Church, which lost $26,000; insurance $10,000. Two little girls, daughters of John Meizler, Amanda ten and Mary seven years of age, were killed by a wall falling upon them.

OLD FORT.—Petters Fort Hotel, R. H. Porter, Esq, Proprietor, is one of the best Hotels between Spruce Creek and Lewisburg, or between Bellefonte and Lewistown. Mr. Porter is a genial whole souled man and understands, and attends to his business well. His table, and all other accommodations are of the very best and his charges are most reasonable.

TAXATION.—We, in order to issue our paper, before the meeting of the Republican Convention on Wednesday, (to-day) must forego the pleasure of correcting the mis-statements, errors and palpable falsehoods which appear in a letter written for the Democratic Watchman last week, on the finances of Centre county, by S. S. Wolf, County Treasurer. Mr. Wolf has evidently forgotten something. We will refresh his memory next week.

NEW HOUSE.—L. Haas, Esq., the enterprising Brewer has erected for himself a handsome and commodious residence just opposite his brewery, at Roopsburg. The carpenter work was done by George Switzer, an excellent workman, and the plastering by O. B. Lambert and C. W. Lambert—two better plasterers than these gentlemen are hard to find. Mr. Haas deserves credit for the improvements he is making, and for the patriotism he manifests in obeying the laws of the land. He is truly a good citizen.

FIRE IN MILROY.—On last Saturday night the stable belonging to Breon's hotel, in Milroy, was discovered to be on fire. Water in abundance being close at hand, the flames were extinguished before much damage was done. Scarcely had this been saved until fire broke out in another stable near by, which was entirely consumed.—In about half an hour after the latter was devoured, and the citizens had retired to their homes, another fire broke out, this time being in the large barn on the farm of Mr. A. Swartzell, adjoining the town, which was consumed, with all its contents, save the stock. Mr. Swartzell's loss, we are informed, will reach about $5,000.

The fires were the work of an incendiary, who has been arrested and safely housed in the Lewistown jail.

REBERSBURG.—Philip Woodley, Esq., is Post Master at Rebersburg. He is an active energetic Republican. Is in the dry goods business with Henry Kreamer, Esq. Mr. Kreamer is a Democrat and deputy Post Master. Who will say now that President Grant is a tyrant? These gentlemen have a handsome store and are doing a safe business.

——H. E. Meyer is a young man of rare and peculiar talents as a musician. He may have equals, but think it would be hard to find any one superior to him in his profession. We wish him long life and abundant success.

CHEAP Peaches is the cryeverywhere, but at Bellefonte, when we poor souls have to pay full price, why is it we must pay $2,75 per crate, for only medium ones, when our Milesburg friends can get equally as good for $2,00 per crate? It looks as if there was some imposition some where. The papers tell us (do they lie) that Peaches are selling in Philadelphia at from 20 to 75 cts., per box, but suppose we say they are worth $1,00 per box, the express on them is 75 cts, more, making cost $1,75. The selling price $2,75 per box, or a profit of $1,00 per box, a very nice percentage.

A LOVER OF PEACHES.

FIRE.—We dislike very much to write the word "fire" nevertheless it becomes our painful duty to chronicle the fact that the barn on the farm of Henry Brockerhoff, near Roopsburg, J. H. Kline, farmer, caught fire and was entirely consumed by the devouring element on Thursday the 24th inst., between the hours of 3 and 4 o'clock P. M. Mr. Kline's loss is heavy, indeed, he having lost all his crop, his seed wheat, his farming implements including a threshing machine, hay-rake, cultivators &c. One calf and 8 hogs perished in the flames. His horses and one four horse wagon were saved. Mr. Kline had no insurance. Farmers of Centre, will you fold your arms and see him suffer? The people of Roopsburg put forth almost superhuman efforts to save the house of Mr. Kline and miraculously succeeded. This praise is due the Roopsburg Hose company composed of the following energetic men, Capt. Charles, Geo. Switzer, Reub Switzer, C. W. Lambert, Secretary; L. Haas, Treasury, Frank Hazel, Geo. Breon, Daniel Klinger and Mott Anderson. All of these gentlemen worked like heroes, and some of them were terribly burned. Bellefonters should have been present, they could perhaps have learned how to work efficiently at a fire. All the surrounding property was saved. We again hope that Mr. Kline will have the sympathies of our people in his great loss. Remember, reader the Golden Rule: "Do unto others as ye would they should do unto you." We hope his loss will be made up.

DEATH ON THE RAILROAD.—A fatal accident occurred on the P. & E. Railroad, on Saturday morning last, at Westport, above Renova, by which, as far as we can learn, 11 persons were killed and several severely wounded. The accident occurred by a collision of a freight and passenger train. We say accident; but it was by the grossest, wicked, wreckless, carelessness. Jas. Moore Ward, an excellent young man and a resident of this place was among the victims. His remains were brought home on last Sunday and were intered in the Cemetery at 4 o'clock, P. M. When will the people demand their rights as against the Railroads? When will they teach those wreckless railroad managers, that murder is murder no matter how, where or when committed, or by whom—a private individual or a Railroad corporation? When will our Legislators go to work honestly and legislate for the people? Jas. Moore Ward murdered on the P. & E. road with eleven others. Let it be so recorded! and let the murderers be punished.

OBITUARY.—The following resolutions were adopted by Centre Furnace Lodge, No. 644, I. O. of G. T., located in Harris township, Centre county, on the death of Brother Jno. T. Wilson:

WHEREAS.—The deceased brother Jno. T. Wilson formerly a Charter Member of Centre Furnace Lodge No. 644, having removed from this place, taking a clearance card and depositing the same in Altoona Lodge.

Resolved.—That we as a Lodge desire to offer some tribute of respect to the departed brother.

Resolved.—That while we bow in heart-stricken submission to the will of God, in the death of Brother Wilson, our mourning finds its greatest relief, in the assurance that our loss is his infinite gain.

Resolved.—That we tender our lasting sympathy to the friends of the deceased and pray that each one of them may find unspeakable comfort, in trusting God.

Resolved.—That in the death of brother Wilson, the Order of Good Templars, has lost a faithful and efficient member—one who by his christian character won the love of all who knew him, an honorable position in our fraternity and a lasting place in our memories.

Resolved.—That as a token of respect we wear the usual badge of mourning, and that our Charter be draped for thirty days.

Resolved.—That a copy of these Resolutions be transmitted to the friends of the deceased, entered upon our Journal and published in the Bellefonte REPUBLICAN and in the Keystone Good Templar.

J. P. MOORE,
B. F. BROWN,
B. H. BEAVER. } Committee.

For the REPUBLICAN.

BOGGS AHEAD.—Mr. William Boggs, of Milesburg, raised on one acre and twenty eight rods of land forty five bushels of good plump wheat. This piece of ground was inundated by the flood of June 1870, and the clover on it so badly sanded that it could not be mowed, he therefore left it remain in that condition until the 17th, of September, when he hired two teams ploughed and sowed it the same day. It was harvested on the 7th, of July, and when cut, gathered and shocked, there were sixty dozen sheaves of very large bind. This he garnered in season and good order, and when thrash-yielded the above number of bushels.

A fact connected with this, worthy of notice to first class farmer's is that Mr. Boggs is a carpenter by trade and pays but little attention to farming but we think what he does farm amply pays him.

How is that for Republican wheat? If Pennsvalleyor anyother deomcrat can beat this we would be glad to hear from them.

For the REPUBLICAN.

REBERSBURG, Aug. 20, 1871.

COL. BROWN; Dear Sir:—Please announce this week and next, through your local columns that the Teachers' Examination for Bellefonte, will take place in the public school building on Wednesday, Sept. 6th, commencing at 9 o'clock, in the morning Applicants to come furnished with paper, pen and ink.

The directors of the borough as well as the citizens, and patrons of the schools are invited to be present.

Yours &c.
R. M. MAGEE.

PENNSVALLEY ITEMS.

.....Penn Hall is a neat village situate in Gregg twp., about one mile East of Spring Mills. It contains a good Academy, under the supervision of Prof. Trouxal and Otto. They are men of experience in their business, have a superior school numbering over sixty students.

.....John Bartgus, has a splendid brick residence in Penn Hall. He has made a fortune farming and retired to private life.

.....Maj. J. B. Fisher, has a handsome residence in this place. It is built of brick and contains all the modern improvements. He also has a first class store. The room is large, neat and clean and the goods on the shelves are adjusted so neatly as to make it almost impossible for any person to enter without purchasing something. Maj. Fisher is a good citizen—we are sorry to say a Democrat; but he was a war Democrat and sound for the Union, for the soldiers and the vigorous prosecution of the war. These facts should have made a good Republican of him. H. H. Yearick and Wm. Pealer, are clerks of Maj. Fisher, and are excellent young men. May the trade of the Major increase.

.....Wm. Wolf, is proprietor of the Hotel in this place. It is a large commodious building and we must say that it is a great pity it is not kept as it should be. Such ahouse should be an honor to the place, and really the travelers home.

..Gen. Geo. Buchanan, lives about ¼ of a mile from Penn Hall. The Gen. is looking well, considering that he has reached the age alloted to man by the Psalmist. The General gave two noble sons to his country—to the cause of God, Union and Liberty. These sons were named Evan M. and Thomas McKean Buchanan. The remains of these noble boys sleep in the Bellefonte Cemetery. May the old General live to see Government and the principles for which his sons, and many other brave men, gave their lives, established upon a sure foundation—so sound that no rebel or traitor will ever again be able to place them in jeopardy.

....Dr. J. B. Leitzell lives near Penn Hall. He is a most excellent Physician, is a good and true man in every respect and is growing both in practice and in favor with the people. Honest merit must and will win.

....S. J. Herring, Esq., is one of the most useful citizens of Gregg twp. He is a scientific farmer, Justice of the Peace, and Lawyer to every body, Democrat and Republican. The squire is qualified to hold any position in the gift of the people of this county; but unfortunately for him, he is one of those men who has an opinion of his own and never fails to express it. The result is, he always has to be thrust aside for weaker men, and men of smaller capacity. The men who do the work in political parties are seldom, if ever, rewarded. The Squire, we hope may have better luck in the future; but we have not faith to believe that he will.

....There are two new buildings being erected in Penn Hall. They will make neat residences when finished.

.....There is a blacksmith shop, a wagon makers shop and a shoe maker's shop, all full of work, doing a thriving business. If these men would all vote the Republican ticket and therefore, in favor of "Protection to American industry," they would soon realize the difference in their trade. Protection means plenty of work; free trade means idleness, poverty, ruin. Protection gives labor to every one. Free trade ruins American manufactories, throws idle American mechanics, and gives employment to England's half paid and half fed laborers.

.....On the farm of Maj. J. B. Fisher; F. D. Hosterman, tenant, there is a field of as magnificent corn as we have ever seen. It is regular all over the field. The field contains about 12 acres. We pulled one stock, which measures 12 feet. It is our opinion the whole field will average 11 feet in hight.

Spring Mills is a neat town in Gregg twp. It takes its name from a spring that is said to be 80 feet in depth, and the Duncan flouring mills. The mill belongs to R. H. Duncan, Esq., and is being run to its full capacity. Mr. Duncan, also owns a saw, and a shingle mill, which are of inestimable value to the citizens of Pennsvalley. Mr. Duncan, is one of the most energetic men in this valley and has done more to consumate our railroad enterprise than any other living man in the county. If all the citizens of Pennsvallay had worked energetically and in good faith, as he has done the railroad would now be under contract from Lewisburg to Spruce Creek. He has, this summer, erected a building for Hotel purposes. It contains 21 rooms and everything convenient, a good stable, out-houses, ice-house, billiard rooms, &c. Than this, in our opinion, there is no better stand in Pennsvalley and the man who is lucky enough to rent it may consider his fortune made. It will make a summer resort for City people, and we have no doubt become notorious as such, for Penn's Creek and Sinking Creek abound with trout and other fish. Mr. Duncan, owns a magnificent residence and a beautiful well filled and well arranged store. At his shingle and saw mills he manufactures shingles, staves for flour barrels, pickets, plastering lath, &c. He deals on the square and farmers in need of any of these things would do well to send in their orders to him.

.....Thomas & Samuel Jameson, are putting up new dwellings on the line of the new railroad in the locality where it is supposed the depot will be erected. They are both carpenters—both Democrats, but we hope when the railroad shall have been completed they will get their eyes open, so as to see things in their true light, and be prepared to say to Democracy as the SAVIOR said to the Devil, get behind me Saten.

....Mrs. Woods, a widow lady lives at Spring Mills. She owns a rich farm in Potter twp. Her son Dr. J. Woods, served three years in the Union Army. Patriotic mothers, generally have patriotic Sons.

.....L. B. M'Intire has purchased a neat farm of sixty acres near this place. It is in a good state of cultivation. He raised from three acres of oats this year 143 bushels.

.....The water power of R. H. Duncan never fails. There are ten large and never failing lime stone springs besides the deep one spoken of above, in the basin of his dam. We will have more in regard to Spring Mills and Gregg twp., farmers and mechanics next week.

.....Potterz Mills is an enterprising town situated in Potter twp. The Bellefonte and Lewistown Turnpike road passes through it. It contains two stores, a Hotel, a grist mill, a Woolen Factory a good school house and several comfortable private residences.

.....The Woolen Factory is run by Jno. Boozer & Davis Evans, Esqs., under the firm name of Boozer & Evans. It is driven by steam, 20 horse power. It contains a steam coloring apparatus, two setts carding machines, one sett 48 inch, new 360 spindle mule, or spinner, one sett 30 cards 240 spinning mule, six power Looms, two carpet looms, one a Jacquard. The looms weave Cassimers, Satinet, Jeans, Flannels, Blankets, carpets, striped and flowered, and yarns. This firm employ thirty hands when at full work, and work up 50,000 pounds of wool per year. We saw wool from Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, and from nearly all the Western and middle States. It is a live firm and the people know it and have confidence in it. Messrs Boozer & Evans, are good men and we have no hesitancy in recommending them to the people of Pennsylvania.

The Hotel is kept by Martin L. Leitzele, Esq. Everybody knows M. Leitzell, and know that he is a good clever man—the right man in the right place. He is a first class Landlord, keeps an excellent house. His table is not excelled in the county—his beds and bedding are of the very best. Persons wisbing a pleasant retreat from the cares of business, or who wish to recuperate their health, can not do better than spend a few months with Mr. Leitzell, at the Potter's Mills Hotel.

.....Wm. J. Thompson & Bro., are heavily engaged in the Dry-Goods business at this place. They also own the flouring mill, saw mill and shingle and lath mills. They are energetic, enterprising men, have the entire confidence of the people and are consequently, doing an extensive business.

Wm. Allison, Esq., now owns both of the beautiful brick residences, formerly the property of James and John Potter. He also owns the farm, Hotel building and a half interest in the Woolen-Factory-building. He is one of the substantial men of Potter twp., and a useful member of the Presbyterian church. Property is a blessing to such men as Mr. Allison.

.....Adam Smith, owns and runs the Potter's Mills Tannery, He is doing a good business. He makes the best harness leather manufactured in the State. Mr. Smith, is a first-rate tanner himself and employs none but the best of mechanics.

.....David M. Henney, is a live Republican, an honest man and one of the best blacksmiths in Centre county. He has built himself a good house, and never thinks of complaining of hard times. He says he never in all his life made any money until after Mr. Lincoln was elected President of the United States, and he further says, if the people want hard times they must vote the Democratic ticket, place that party, again in power, and then they can have over again, the hard times, experienced in 1857, under the weak and imbicile Administration of James Buchanan.

.....Isaac Adams, a good and live Republican, keeps a fashionable Ice-Cream Saloon and is well patronized by young and old. By the way the young folks of Potter's Mills are full of health and intelligence. The ladies are beautiful. Few of the young men vote the Democratic ticket.

.....B. D. Brisbin, an enterprising intelligent man, has a beautiful and well filled store at this place. He is bound to succeed.

.....Henry Crawford, saddler and Harness manufacturer, is one of Pennsvalley's choicest mechanics. He is a wide-a-wake Republican, and is well patronized, which is greatly to his credit and the people of Potter twp., both Democrats and Republicans. Political differences of opinion should not be carried into business transactions.

....Fred Newman, is an excellent tailor and attends to his shop regularly. He works late and early as industriously as if he had a large family to maintain, yet strange to say he is a bachelor. He is also a good Republican and a woman's rights man. Ladies of Potter, you will, please, take notice. Some one of you can make a fortune. Do not all apply at once. Gentlemen, if you want fits and your clothes well made, call on Mr. Newman.

...There are ten widows residing in this place. Some of them young, some not so young. All gay and handsome. Widowers of Centre county, please cut this out and place it in your hats.

....W. W. Woods, dealer in patent rights, &c., is a young man full of energy and industry. He resides in the beautiful residence, formerly occupied by old Dr. Wilson, father-in-law to Hon. A. G. Curtin, Mr. Woods, is a good Republican and an honor to Potter twp. We wish we had 500 more such men as he. We could then say farewell Court House Ring with all your corruption, trickery, and heavy taxation.

....Wm. & James Armstrong, leading mechanics in the Woolen Factory, own, together, a large and comfortable double residence. They live like princes. They are happy and contented and vote the Republican ticket. They say because it is in favor of freedom and protection to American mechanics. Their heads are level.

....The School House at Potter's Mills is large and commodious and proves beyond a cavil, that the majority of the people in this place are Republicans. Republicanism and intelligence go hand in hand. A few more school houses and the railroad, will revolutionize the politics of Pennsvalley.

....Dr. F. Moyer, is a good Republican and a first class Physician. He resides in one portion of the old homestead of Dr. Wilson. He is married to one of Doctor Wilson's daughters. He is a very clever man, a good neighbor and a gentlemen in every sense of the word.

....Wm. M'Cormick, is the leading carpenter of this place. He is an excellent mechanic and a man of steady habits. He is intelligent and honest, and how he manages to cling to the old rotten, free trade bark of Democracy is more than we can explain. All that class of men should come over to the Republican party and vote for their own true interests.

For the REPUBLICAN.

CELEBRATION.—Boalsburg became highly enthusiastic on Saturday, August 19th, by the arrival of the day chosen for their grand S. S. Celebration. Nine o'clock was the hour appointed for the meeting of all the different schools that were to participate. The Boalsburg Saxhorn Band being very officious in conducting the several schools of the town from their headquarters to the place where they were organized and formed into a procession under the chief marshalship of Mr. Charles Shaffer The procession (numbering faur schools), headed by the band, which discoursed some beautiful pieces of music, was marched to the entrance of the splendid grove, of Mr. Stover, adjacent to the turnpike leading from this place to Bellefonte, where they awaited the arrival of several other schools that were to join them in the jubilee. Halting but a few minutes, the other schools arrived, a reorganization of the entire force taking place, the procession was augmented to eleven well represented Sunday Schools, each with their elegantly decorated banner, with emblems of artistical design. Forming in line again under the escort of the band, they resumed their march, marching around the ground and passing by the speakers stand to the seats, and were seated.

What a beautiful sight it was to see so many little ones marching along under the brilliant rays of the sun with their streaming banners, their toilets observed with the gratest strictness and precission. The Rev. Hamil favored the audience with one of his appropriate and highly interesting addresses and was succeeded by the Rev. Groh, with an address of equal import. Music was discoursed alternately by the schools throughout the exercise.

After the close of the addresses, dinner was announced, all partaking bountifully of the good things and delicacies of the season which had been previously prepared by the ever-thoughtful mothers and elder sisters of the little ones. All feeling gay and festive, the afternoon was passed in promenading, playing, swinging, &c. A few lovely airs from the band added much to the pleasure of the almost innumerable number of merry participators. Thus was the afternoon spent until about 6 o'clock, when they began to disperse for their houses, with glad hearts and happy thoughts. A Sunday School meeting was gotten up.....On the same day shortly after dinner the Quick step Base Ball club of Boalsburg, received a challenge from the Centre Furnace club, to play, which they readily accepted. After playing two innings the score stood 15 runs for the Quick step club and 8 runs for the Centre Furnace club.

The Furnace club discovering the condition of affairs, did not care much for Base Ball just then. Several of the number had to go home immediately. They had already overstayed their time, consequently breaking up the game.
